Captain Henry A. Phillips, O91006, Ordnance Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself on the morning of 16 April 1966 through an act of heroism that resulted in the saving of a life. Captain Phillips entered Quarters Number 32 Frankford Arsenal, which was on fire, through an upstairs window. At this time the building was filled with hot gases and dense smoke of such intensity that other people, including members of the Frankford Arsenal Civilian Fire Department, had been thwarted in their attempts to enter. Captain Phillips' purpose was to search for a United States Army soldier and his daughter and try to remove them to safety. Captain Phillips located the daughter and carried her from the building. In his attempt to remove the soldier from the burning building, his efforts were compounded by the fact that the floor he was standing on was water soaked and that the soldier was lying under an ironing board upon which stood an electric iron which was connected to a wall outlet. In his attempt to reach the soldier, Captain Phillips received a severe electric shock. At this point in time, he returned to the upstairs window, called for a pair of gloves, returned to the soldier, and then bravely removed the ironing board and carried the soldier to safety from the burning building. Captain Phillips' mature judgment, coolness in the excitement of a chaotic situation, initiative, and complete lack of concern for his personal safety depicts the finest traditions of the service reflecting outstanding credit upon himself, Frankford Arsenal and the United States Army.

First Lieutenant Kent W. Owen, FV3119846, United States Air Force, distinguished himself by heroism while serving with the 524th Tactical Fighter Squadron, attached to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Brigade, 1st Infantry Division on 12 November 1965 in the Republic of Vietnam. Lieutenant Owen was flying forward air control in support of 1st Infantry Division units engaged in combat at Ap Bau Bang. He observed three separate attacks on armored personnel carriers by hostile recoilless rifle fire. From his normal controlling altitude of 1,500 feet, the source of the fire could not be pinpointed. Disregarding his personal safety, Lieutenant Owen descended to an altitude of 50 feet in order to locate the weapon crew's exact position. During this maneuver his aircraft sustained direct hits from small arms fire. Despite the damage, he climbed to his original altitude and directer fighter aircraft into the gun position. The strike was a complete success. In addition, Lieutenant Owen directed fighters against a mortar emplacement and a village. Following the fighters' departure, armed Viet Cong were observed fleeing from the ruined village. He again descended and engaged the insurgents with an M-16 rifle. Two of the Viet Cong were observed to be hit in this action. First Lieutenant

Owen's actions are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the United States Air Force and the United States Army.
