I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-SERVICE CROSS for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted men:

Corporal Paul G. Foster (Service No. _____), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company F, 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Sldamak, Korea, on 26 June 1952. Company F was attacking Hill 206 through a heavy barrage of small-arms, grenade, and mortar fire from well-entrenched enemy troops. The second platoon had pushed forward within 30 yards of the crest of the hill when it was halted by deadly fire from a reinforced machine-gun position on the left. Without hesitation, Corporal Foster ran within 20 feet of the gun position and attacked it with grenades. He continued his aggressive action for approximately 15 minutes and finally silenced the gun. When a second gun opened fire on the right, he immediately raced across the open ground, vigorously pressed his grenade attack against the hostile emplacement, and hurled enemy grenades back into their position in rapid succession. Although urged by his comrades to withdraw, he continued his bold attack for 8 hours, inflicting casualties on the enemy and silencing the gun. During this action, he was knocked unconscious by the explosion of a grenade which had become lodged on his bandolier. His inspirational conduct and determined actions contributed materially to the successful accomplishment of his unit's mission. Corporal Foster's gallant actions and sustained courage reflect the greatest credit on himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Corporal Atsuo Miura (Service No. _____), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company F, 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Karhyon-ni, Korea, on 12 June 1952. Attacking a stubbornly defended hill, the second platoon of Company F was halted near a trench at the top of the slope by small-arms and grenade fire. The platoon was forced to withdraw approximately 50 yards. Corporal Miura voluntarily left his sheltered position and, armed only with a pistol and bayonet, started back up the hill in the face of intense fire, picking up enemy grenades en route. Reaching the enemy trench, he threw grenades into it, driving the enemy into their bunkers. Jumping into the trench, he tossed grenades into the bunkers. When a comrade came to his aid with a flame thrower, they cleared the emplacement, thus enabling the platoon to move up. As they were rejoining the platoon at the crest of the hill, a concussion grenade fell between Corporal Miura and his platoon sergeant. Corporal Miura threw his helmet on the grenade and flung himself on the helmet. The force of the explosion shattered the helmet and momentarily stunned him. On recovering, he pursued and captured the enemy soldier who had thrown the grenade. Corporal Miura's gallant actions reflect the highest credit on himself and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the United States Army.

Lieutenant Colonel Aung Potiganit, , Infantry, Thailand Army, a member of the Thailand Battalion attached to the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the enemy near Kumbwa, Korea, on 15 March 1952. Approaching the forward observation post of Company C, Thailand Battalion, on an inspection of front-line positions, Colonel Potiganit came under sniper fire from an enemy position approximately 200 yards ahead. Displaying fearlessness and resolute determination, he ordered his men to take cover, and with disregard for his personal safety he remained in full view and under direct enemy fire in an attempt to locate the hostile sniper. Despite a hail of enemy fire striking around him, he studied the terrain, located the sniper, and, remaining in his exposed vantage, directed the delivery of accurate fire upon the fanatical foe until the position was neutralized. Colonel Potiganit's unflinching courage, tenacity, and devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Leo J. Rogers, Infantry, United States Army, a member of Headquarters, 9th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroism at Fort Dix, New Jersey, on 7 November 1952. Lieutenant Rogers arrived in the vicinity of the impact area of a rifle-grenade range and discovered that a detail of men had unknowingly entered the impact area while proceeding to the scene of a brush fire, and that one of the men in the detail had stepped on an unexploded grenade. The grenade detonated and wounded three men. Being fully cognizant of the density of unexploded grenades in the area and without regard for his personal safety, he proceeded into the area in order to lead the detail to safety. When he reached the wounded men, he attempted to guide two of them out of the danger area. Another explosion occurred when they were halfway out and Lieutenant Rogers was fatally wounded. The prompt, courageous, and determined action taken by Lieutenant Rogers in the face of grave danger reflects distinct credit on himself and the military service.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Private First Class Thomas B. Laws (Service No. _____), Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of Company B, 793d Military Police Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism at Bamberg, Germany, on 3 January 1953. When Private Laws heard cries for help coming from a 5-year-old German boy who had fallen into the icy, turbulent waters of the Regnitz River, he recognized that the child was in dire distress. Unhesitatingly, he jumped into the cold, swift waters, fully clothed, in a heroic effort to swim to the aid of the child. He successfully accomplished the rescue of the young boy, who was helpless to extricate himself from the dangerous waters. Private Laws' prompt and courageous action, without regard for his personal safety, reflects distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Second Lieutenant Paul J. McCauley, _____, Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery C, 704th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism near Fort Dawes, Massachusetts, on 23 August 1952. Lieutenant McCauley's attention was attracted to cries for help coming from three men whose small fishing boat had capsized, throwing them into the rough and icy waters off Deer Island Point. He immediately rushed to the shore. Without hesitation, he dived into the icy and polluted waters of Outer Boston Harbor and, without regard for his personal safety, swam over 200 yards to assist in the rescue of the distressed men. Despite the hazards of high winds, strong tide, and dangerous cross-currents, he proceeded to effect a successful rescue, which doubtlessly was instrumental in saving the life of at least one man who was suffering from severe exposure, shock, and immersion. Lieutenant McCauley's prompt and courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private Robert B. Quinn (Service No. _____), Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery B, 90th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion (90-mm), distinguished himself by heroism at South Franklin Mountain, El Paso, Texas, on 11 November 1952. While scaling a steep and treacherous peak on South Franklin Mountain, along with other climbing parties, he responded to a call for help from members of one group. One member of that party lost his footing and fell to his death and a companion was in dire distress, helpless to extricate himself from an extremely dangerous position. Private Quinn, with disregard for his personal safety, unhesitatingly climbed down the precipitous mountain side in attempt to aid the fallen man. Upon reaching his comrade and knowing that he could not help him, he hastily climbed to the position where the fallen man's companion was clinging helplessly to the face of a cliff in a state of nervous shock. With great presence of mind and using extremely good judgment, he successfully assisted the man in his descent to a place of safety, carefully guiding and directing each step and insuring safe and secure footholds. Private Quinn's calm, prompt, and courageous actions during the rescue activities saved the life of a fellow soldier and reflect distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Joseph W. Titcomb (Service No. _____), Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery C, 704th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism near Fort Dawes, Massachusetts, on 23 August 1952. He immediately rushed to the shore. Without hesitation, he dived into the icy and polluted waters of Outer Boston Harbor and, without regard for his personal safety, swam over 200 yards to assist in the rescue of the distressed men. Despite the hazards of high winds, strong tide, and dangerous cross-currents, he proceeded to effect a successful rescue, which doubtlessly was instrumental in saving the life of at least one man who was suffering from severe exposure, shock, and immersion. Corporal Titcomb's prompt and courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Theodore D. Yochum (Service No. _____), Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery C, 704th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism near Fort Dawes, Massachusetts, on 23 August 1952. Private Yochum's attention was attracted to cries for help coming from three men whose small fishing boat had capsized, throwing them into the rough and icy waters off Deer Island Point. He immediately rushed to the shore. Without hesitation, he dived into the icy and polluted waters of Outer Boston Harbor and, without regard for his personal safety, swam over 200 yards to assist in the rescue of the distressed men. Despite the hazards of high winds, strong tide, and dangerous cross-currents, he proceeded to effect a successful rescue, which doubtlessly was instrumental in saving the life of at least one man who was suffering from severe exposure, shock, and immersion. Private Yochum's prompt and courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.
