Private Howard L. Esworthy, Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of the Military Police Security Detachment (8225), distinguished himself by heroism in the vicinity of Heunde, Korea, on 2 August 1956. During the decline of a typhoon and while on normal police duty, Private Esworthy was notified that an officer and two nurses had been swept off the rocky shore into the ocean. Quickly securing an air mattress and a coil of rope, he rushed to the scene of the accident. Fully aware of the hazards involved, he climbed down a steep incline and onto a high rock in an attempt to effect a rescue. When one of the women was within approximately 20 feet, Private Esworthy threw the rope to her but, because of the turbulence of the water, was unable to make contact. At this juncture, his position was engulfed by huge waves and he was carried out to sea by the swift tidal current, and drowned. Although unsuccessful in his heroic attempt to save the lives of the three people, Private Esworthy's consummate gallantry and supreme sacrifice has set an inspiring example of valor to all who observed him, reflecting utmost credit on himself and upholding the noble traditions of the military service.

V..SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

First Lieutenant George E. Moglia, (then Second Lieutenant), Medical Service Corps, United States Army, a member of the 53d Medical Detachment (Helicopter Ambulance), distinguished himself by heroism near Verdun, France on 23 July 1955. Lieutenant Moglia, attached to Headquarters Advance Section, USAREUR Communications Zone, on temporary duty, was preparing his H-13 helicopter for flight when he was notified of an aircraft accident. He immediately proceeded to the scene of the mishap by air. Upon arrival, Lieutenant Moglia noticed that the aircraft was submerged in a small lake with only the tail surfaces visible. Realizing that the pilot might be trapped in the cockpit, Lieutenant Moglia, with complete disregard to personal safety, entered the fuel covered water and attempted to extricate the pilot. After braving the fuel-filled water and spending long minutes under the surface, Lieutenant Moglia became ill. Despite being ill from swallowing the water and getting it in his eyes, he continued his efforts and with the assistance of a fellow officer, he succeeded in removing the pilot from the wreckage and transported him to shore and into the ambulance. Lieutenant Moglia's heroic attempt to save the life of a brother officer at a decided risk to his own reflects the greatest credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Gordon M. Murray, _____, United States Army, while a member of Headquarters, Headquarters and Service Company, 7804 Army Unit, Advance Section, USAREUR Communication Zone, distinguished himself by heroism at For de Tavannes, France, on 22 April 1956. An American soldier had fallen into an 80-foot shaft in the abandoned fort, the walls of which were honeycombed with tunnels and vertical shafts, many of which had caved in or had been choked by falling debris. Private Murray, realizing the danger involved, and knowing he would have to be lowered by rope, that the timbers over the hole upon which men would have to stand was not solidly secure, and that any vibration would cause several hundred pounds of rock to fall upon him, with the possibility of grave injury or loss of his own life, volunteered and was lowered to the bottom of the shaft in an effort to locate and render aid to his comrade. Private Murray's complete disregard for his own life in his efforts to save that of another reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Specialist Third Class Jackey N. Parrott, _____, Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery B, 740th Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion (NIKE), distinguished himself by heroism at San Francisco, California, on 11 May 1956. Upon observing a 32-ton bulldozer roll over on a steep grade, Specialist Parrott immediately went to the aid of the operator who was pinned underneath. Notwithstanding the fact that the bulldozer was perched precariously on its back, and the engine was spewing hot oil, Specialist Parrott immediately crawled under the heavy machinery and shut off the engines. In spite of painful first degree burns suffered as a result of this action, Specialist Parrott remained on the scene and assisted in freeing the operator from the bulldozer. Specialist Parrott's courage and prompt action undoubtedly prevented serious injury or possible death to the operator, reflecting great credit on himself and the military service.
