V. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Specialist Five Harold J. Dias, , United States Army, a member of the 168th Signal Company (MC), Fort Bragg, N.C., distinguished himself by heroism on 4 April 1959. While driving on North Carolina Highway No. 27, Specialist Dias observed an automobile partially submerged in the waters of the Pee Dee River. He immediately stopped his car and, without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, dived into the chilly waters and swam out to the sunken vehicle. After opening the car door and not finding the driver inside, he surfaced for air and was informed by occupants of a small boat that the driver could be seen on the right side of the automobile. Specialist Dias dived again, located and freed the driver and without assistance, carried the victim to shore where he immediately administered artificial respiration. Even though all efforts to revive the drowned man were unsuccessful, the heroic attempt made by Specialist Dias to save a human life reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Wilfred C. Gernandt, , United States Army, a member of Headquarters Detachment, United States Army Garrison, Fort Chaffee, Ark., distinguished himself by heroism at Clear Creek, Silver Bridge, Mountainburg, Ark., on 8 June 1958. When a search was conducted to rescue a young boy believed lost in the treacherous and murky Clear Creek waters, Sergeant Gernandt, unhesitatingly and without regard for his own personal safety, volunteered his services in an effort to locate the child. Despite the many hazards of large boulders and swift channelized currents, he made repeated attempts in a continuous pursuit which involved diving to depths of 10 to 15 feet, and remained submerged for long periods in the murky waters on the rocky river bottom to locate the victim. Sergeant Gernandt persisted in his efforts after all others had abandoned the search. Alone, and already taxed to the limit of his endurance, he finally succeeded in finding the child's body on the bottom of the river and brought the boy to the surface where others assisted him in carrying him ashore. Artificial respiration which was promptly administered, revived the young victim. Sergeant Gernandt's timely and accurate analysis of the situation, selfless determination and utter disregard for his own life were solely instrumental in the location and recovery which ultimately saved the boy's life. His heroic actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army, and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant for meritorious achievement on 8 June 1958, as announced in General Orders Number 87, Headquarters, U.S. Army Training Center, Field Artillery, Fort Chaffee, Ark., 7 May 1959.)

Sergeant First Class Charles P. Lothamer, , United States Army, a member of Headquarters Company, 48th Transportation Group (Truck), Fort Eustis, Va., distinguished himself by heroism at Newport News, Va., on 19 March 1959. Upon learning that a 2-year-old girl was trapped in the bedroom of a burning home, Sergeant Lothamer, immediately and without regard for his own personal safety, entered the house and attempted to save the stranded child. He continued his efforts until forced to leave by the intense heat and heavy smoke. The unselfish and courageous actions taken by Sergeant Lothamer materially assisted in the ultimate rescue of the child, and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Raymond L. Viers, , Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 April 1959. While on leave at Stone Mountain, Ga., Lieutenant Viers volunteered to assist a Georgia State Park employee to rescue and evacuate a 19-year-old airman from Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Ga. The airman had lost his footing on the slippery moss on the steeply sloping mountain side, tumbled down the steep face of Stone Mountain and become lodged on a ledge some 600 feet below. With profound courage and without regard for his personal safety, Lieutenant Viers tied himself into a 1-inch rope and was lowered over the treacherous cliff. Together with the park employee, first aid was administered, after which Lieutenant Viers climbed hand-over-hand up the vertical face of the cliff to secure a stretcher on which to evacuate the injured airman. The ascent was accomplished without tie-in to the belay rope. Upon obtaining a stretcher, Lieutenant Viers tied himself into the belay rope and again was lowered over the cliff at the same time guiding the stretcher down the mountain side to the injured man. Because of excruciating pain, it was necessary for the two men to physically restrain the injured man until he was tied into the stretcher. Lieutenant Viers and the park employee guided the stretcher up the side of the mountain. The two men then ascended the 600-foot cliff under their own hand-over-hand power. The intrepid, calm, firm, and decisive display of great courage on the part of Lieutenant Viers in performing this extraordinary feat in the face of extreme danger and at considerable risk of losing his own life reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army.
